These were all the charges now formulated, but there would be a further charge of stealing two rent-rolls, for 1888 and 1889; and since the prisoner's disappearar ce a large number, of other, books, rent-rolls, counterfoils, etc., had been missed, and it was therefore very difficult to bring these fresh charges in complete form at money himself. The amount he had accounted for to the shroff would be entered by him, and the rest not. He also managed to make the rent-rolls correspond, so that in the rent-rolls there were direct entries of the whole amount in the ecciet counterfolls and the accounts of the shipff their was a smaller amount, only that which had actually passed through correctly. Several instances of this would be adduced. That wis the explanation of the third, fourth, and fifth charges. In connection with these transactions arose the charge of forgery - defendant had given receipts which were marked with a "chop" not the shroff's. Other receipts had been made out for smaller amounts than were paid, to Alves; then after the shroff had received those smalles amounts and "chopped" the receipts, these had been altered before they were sent back to the Crown lessee, so that he had a receipt for the amount he had paid. Out of this had also arisen the charges of making false entries in the Treasury accounts. In order to carry out this of Hongkong! means of taking the money, false entries had to be made in the counterfolls; there were nine instances of this. The last charge of
